Christine Flynn works with senior leaders and their teams to enhance individual, team and organisational performance. Using her extensive personal experience as a public sector senior executive and as a Director and Chair of Boards of Governance, Christine applies systems thinking to the complex problems faced by leaders. Capable of working across all aspects of public and private organisations, Christine's focus is on organisations, their people and how they perform. She is highly experienced in the relational systems of organisation, strategy and planning, governance, organisational change, leadership development and human resources.

Recent clients include Defence, and public service departments in Commonwealth, State and Territory jurisdictions, including Defence, Communities, Attorney General's, Corrective Services, Education and Environment and Natural Resources. Christine has also worked in the local government sector with regional councils, and in New Zealand. She works with the private sector in resources and engineering.

Christine is the Chair of Queenslanders Credit Union and is past-President of the Institute of Public Administration (IPAA) Queensland and past member of the Queensland Audit Office (QAO) Audit and Risk Management Committee. She is an accredited facilitator for the Australian Institute of Company Directors where she delivers the Strategy and Risk modules of the Company Directors Course, Governance for Public Sector Entities course for executives and many in-house CDC and Foundations of Directorship programs nationally. Christine has also been a member of several performance analysis teams, conducting capability and performance reviews of public and private sector organisations.

Christine is an experienced facilitator and presenter, known for her impact and her ability to constructively challenge and support senior staff. She provides a positive balance of energy, humour, strength and directness. She understands and supports the specific nature and value of public service. She has published and presented papers at national and international conferences on public sector change management and leadership and is involved in ongoing research in public sector management.
